EMERGENCY FIRST RESPONSE (EFR) COURSE INFORMATION

deepbluescuba.co.uk : delivering diving dreams

The Emergency First Response (EFR) courses teaches basic first aid utilising a modern, hands on approach.

The courses are based on the same protocols that are used by medical professionals and teach you how to deal with both life threatening and non-life threatening illnesses and injuries.

Within the programme there are a number of courses:

EFR primary care – teaches you how to deal with life threatening illnesses and injuries in adults.

EFR secondary care – teaches you how to deal with non-life threatening illnesses and injuries in adults.

EFR care for children – teaches you how to deal with life threatening and non-life threatening illness and injury in infants and children.

At Deep Blue Scuba we include instruction in the use of automated external defibrillators and emergency oxygen units as standard, in the above courses.

The courses meet a number of requirements set out by the H.S.E. for first aid providers in the work place.

The courses are classroom based. At Deep Blue Scuba we normally offer the EFR primary and secondary care courses as a combined set of courses and the EFR care for children course as a stand-alone course. It is, however, possible to complete the EFR primary and secondary care courses independently of one another and equally to complete all courses as a package.
